

Liza Taylor, MSOD

Liza Taylor has worked in the field of Organization Development and Human Resources for over 10 years. She has particular expertise in strategic and human change efforts designed to increase capabilities and organizational performance.

Liza works for the marketing firm Creative Channel Services, a leading Omnicom Group Company in Los Angeles. She specializes in leadership development, talent planning, teambuilding, training, organization effectiveness and change management.

Prior to joining Creative Channel, Liza worked for The Walt Disney Company, Health Net, and Hughes Research Labs. She has also had her own consulting company, Change Consulting, since 2001 and has served numerous non-profit organizations in the areas of board performance, executive coaching and strategic planning.

Liza received her Masters degree in Organization Development from Pepperdine University, a Professional Designation in Human Resource Management from UCLA and a certificate in French language and Civilization from the Sorbonne in Paris. She completed her undergraduate studies in Cultural Anthropology graduating Summa Cum Laude from UCSB. She has lived 5 years outside of the U.S. in Europe and the South Pacific. Her interest in Org Development was inspired by her first-hand experience growing up in an intentional community, which allowed her intensive observation of group dynamics.
